Legos hurt

Pastor Jacob Brimm

Some mornings I wake up before the alarm goes off. One such morning the light was just peaking through the windows as I made my way to the coffee. As I walked through the dimly lit house I dodged the occasional toy until the coast was clear then extended my stride in the open area. All was well; there were no more obstacles. Suddenly the pain that shot through my body not only stopped me dead in my tracks, but also forced me to immediately inspect the cause of the pain. Behold, there it was: a clear LEGO! First I have to wonder what cruel person would think of a clear Lego in the first place, are they not difficult enough to see when colored? Second, I began to realize that there was a lesson to be learned.

As we go through life it is common to take note of the big things, to handle big issues when they arise, and to ensure that the big stuff is in proper order. As a culture we have been convinced that bigger is better, and that size equals relevance. Many people will let you know, the little things add up! Some will tell you that they have the important things under control, but sometimes the little things are left untouched.

The word of God tells us that, 'one who is faithful in a very little is also faithful in much, but one who is dishonest in a very little is also dishonest in much' (16:10). The first part of that verse is very pleasing to read, but the second hurts a little. See the little things do add up. If we handle the little things, we can handle the greater things. If we are good stewards with the little God gives, then He will bless us with more opportunities. The opposite is also true. The little things can stop us quickly. While you may have the big stuff in order, that little Lego might be enough to make you hit your knees!

This month, spend some time looking for Legos in your life. What little thing is there that you can pick up and take care of. There is no reason not to start handling the little things, because if you step on that Lego, it hurts!

Welcome to the world Rhett Samuel Brimm! Rhett was born October 27 weighing 8 lb. 8.3 oz and measuring 21.5 inches long. Congratulations to parents Jeanie and Jacob Brimm and to big brother Clayton.

Veterans recognition planned for November 8

Since Veterans Day is November 11, we are planning a special recognition time for all the veterans in our congregation during the 11am service November 8. So please let Jill Brannen (478-244-9501) know if you are a present or former US military member and which branch as soon as possible.

Follow the worship service, we enjoy a covered dish lunch in Saliba Hall. Meat will be provided. Members, please invite people. Nothing is as effective as a personal invitation. And to our many former members, friends, neighbors and others in our community, please come worship with us on this very special day. We would love to see you.

10 ways to have a fantastic worship experience

by Rich Kirkpatrick

If you are an avid worshiper of Christ and attend church on a regular basis, you probably already know what a fantastic worship experience is to you, right? Or, maybe you don't attend church as often as you might because your past worship experiences never hit the mark. Having been to church more than many, I see the gamut and know that even when one person is soaring in their version of a worship service, another may be unaffected. There are many factors that contribute to why there is so much disparity, but I think I found 10 reasons that will aid you in your experience of worship. I hope these help you!

1. Foster good relationships

Nothing sours a worship experience more than when a worshiper has unresolved conflict as they arrive at church—especially so if with a brother or sister in Christ! Jesus said to "leave the altar" and make it right with that brother or sister for a reason. Our horizontal relationships when healthy allow us to be free to worship.

2. Learn the routine

If your church service always starts five minutes late and you keep coming way early, you might be disappointed at why people show up late. Acquire the culture and embrace it! If you were to go to a Brazilian BBQ and complain that they are rude to vegans you miss the point!

3. Don't keep score

One Sunday the message blew you away. Unfortunately, the next week you were not as captivated by the sermon. Keeping score is not the point of a good experience, is it? A shorter memory can then serve you well. What if you simply saw each Sunday as something new to experience rather than something to compare to what you had before?

4. Try something new

We often look at worship like our favorite breakfast cafe where we are regulars. What if you tried something new on the menu? This might mean if you never have sat on the right side of the sanctuary, you choose to sit on the right. Or, what if you stayed for the refreshment time and met a new person? The opportunities to try something "new" abound!

5. Be in a pack

When we come to church "alone" we lose the power of a gathering. While it is good to be in healthy relationships, it is even better to have cohorts who actually desire to experience God in a more meaningful, deeper way. Knowing a brother or sister is experiencing something more than you inspires you to share in that. Experiences are meant to be shared!

6. Celebrate a moment

While keeping score is bad, it is good to remind ourselves of what worked for us. What moment before, during or after the service did we experience something from God? Surely, if we look for it, there might be more to celebrate than we originally imagined.

7. Promote the good

While it is good to remind ourselves of the good, why not express that sentiment to others? Tell a friend or put on Facebook a blurb about your growing connection to God and see what doors open for you and those who know you!

8. Learn to see God

What is it about God that you look for at church each week? Many of the things we feel disappointed about in our experiences have little to do with things God does! We look to the vehicle of our worship more than the object of our worship. Raising hands might be a means to help me focus, but it is not God. My emotions might be a help at times but can be the opposite as well. What is God and what is not?

9. Own the issue

The worship team might be off-key or unprepared on a particular weekend. Maybe the pastor repeated a sermon he has preached six times. The building may be too cold in the winter or too warm in the summer. Blame shifting to your leaders or even the building is not an excuse. Sure, it does not help to have terrible leadership if that is the case. Taking ownership may open you up to experience the presence of God.

10. Believe God is there

While we can work on many tactical matters of our posture in worship, the fact is this: We must believe God's presence is a constant reality. In this reality, corporate worship offers a unique magnification of His presence through His word and the table we sit at together. Do you believe God is here in our worship?

The Seasoned Saints will leave at 3:00 p.m. November 27 to enjoy The Rock Ranch's drive through mile plus of magical Christmas lights on the farm. This tradition started eight years ago when the late S. Truett Cathy, Founder of Chick-fil-A and The Rock Ranch, purchased a truck load of lights from Lowes and Home Depot during an "After Christmas" sale. He thought folks would enjoy an affordable opportunity to drive through beautifully lit Christmas scenes. This growing lights display gets better and better each year. The plan is to eat on site before the tour. As always, please let Elaine (433-2035) know if you plan to attend.
